The CollegeBound Network Can Help You Find a Career You Love

College Research and Advice Company Offers Resources
To Discover That Perfect Professional Match

Staten Island, NY, February 14, 2012 – Give yourself something that lasts longer than chocolates and flowers this Valentine's Day: Embark on new relationship with a new career.

The CollegeBound Network can help you discover a career you love. CBN's websites offer information about more than 1,000 career-focused institutions offering thousands of degree and certificate programs, plus insight from college and career experts.

"Discover your passion for a profession in 2012 by using The CollegeBound Network to find the right school and program," says Greg O'Brien, CEO of The CollegeBound Network (CBN).

CBN offers five ways to figure out which career is "most attractive" to you:

1. Embrace going back to school.

Career education can help you learn about a new profession and industry or improve your skills to reinvent your career. CollegeSurfing.com serves as a one-stop resource for career education opportunities in health care, technology, business, and other fast-growing fields.

2. Get matched up with a program.

At CollegeBound.net, you can conduct a comprehensive search of the nation's top college and university programs offering traditional bachelor's, master's, and doctorate degrees. Learn from, and get connected, with students, professors, and administrators representing programs that line up with your educational goals.

3. Make a date with online education.

Some relationships are born out of an online effort, from dating websites to scoping out someone's Facebook page. At MyEducation.com, get connected with online programs of study and information about degrees that can lead to career advancement.

4. Discover the potential for a lifelong (professional) relationship.

Don't just look for a career that's "hot." Use CBN resources, including SpaBeautySchools.com and FindTheRightJob.com to discover professions that are destined for future growth and offer continual opportunities to earn more and develop your career over a lifetime.

5. See other career-seekers speak from their heart.

Learn about possible careers and schools by participating in vibrant social networking communities on Facebook and Twitter, including the weekly Twitter #CollegeBound chat, which takes place on the first and third Monday of each month via Twitter.com at 4 p.m. EST.

This Valentine's Day, join others who connected with The CollegeBound Network and ended up having a love affair with their careers.
